

Your brain has many different parts, each with a different job. These parts work together to help you learn.

In the middle of your brain there are parts in charge of emotions, memory, and getting information from your senses.

These parts are always paying attention to the world around you. They help keep you safe.

